Summary

FullStack Engineer | Building the Future from Nigeria

I'm Peter, a young Nigerian fullstack engineer who is passionate about developing solutions that make people's lives better.

At just 16, I've created and implemented practical applications, turning ideas into tools that truly solve problems.

I am always searching for smarter, simpler, and more scalable ways to build technology that serves people. To me, good software is about experience, not just code. It should be trustworthy, friendly, and meaningful.

Every project I work on teaches me something new, both personally and technically. I'm learning, collaborating, and growing into the kind of developer who builds with intention and purpose.

Experience

ScaleItPro

Intern

Lagos Nigeria

June 2025 - Present

- Worked closely with the engineering team, not just writing code but also brainstorming ideas and learning how real projects move from concept to working features that clients actually use.

Debugged and improved applications, from fixing small issues to making apps faster and smoother. Each bug I fixed taught me patience, problem-solving, and the importance of paying attention to detail.

Supported deployment processes and saw firsthand what it takes to move software from “just working on my laptop” to being used by real people. Learned about scalability, security, and why structure matters when building solutions that will last.

Beyond the tech, I'm growing in teamwork, communication, and the discipline needed to thrive in a real work environment.
